Objects have history and each one shapes us in particular ways. They might force us to ask questions and seek explanation, tell stories, pass on traditions, and act as ambassadors from other places, other lives, other loves and other times. Through them we remember.

When something is placed on a plinth it is elevated above the realm of everyday life, transforming the ordinary and familiar into something unexpected. Let's raise them up

Saying Goodbye to Mr Jim & The Goodbye Box &

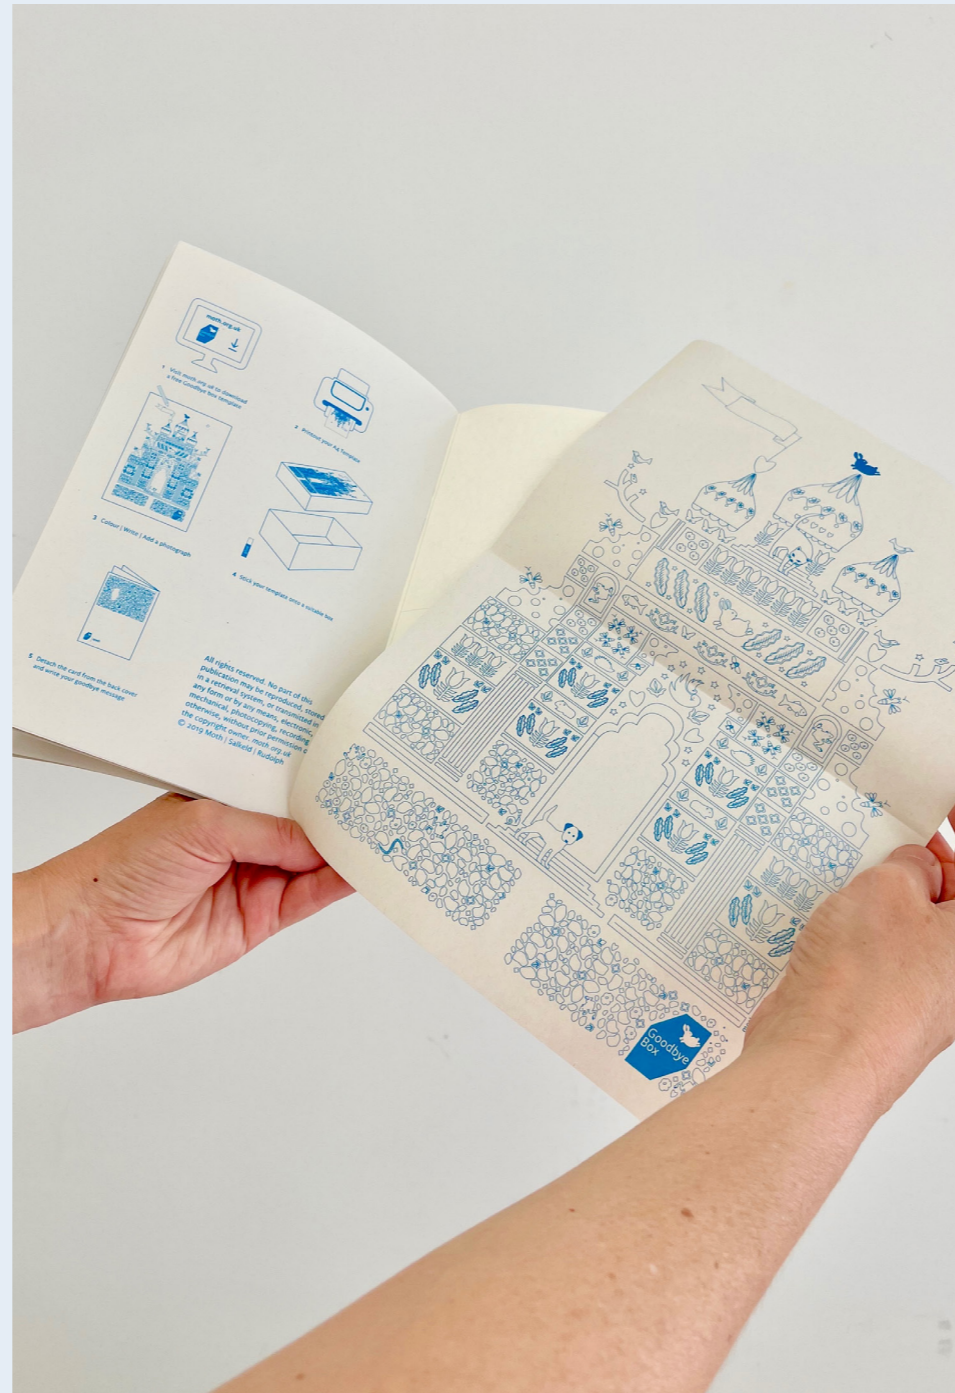

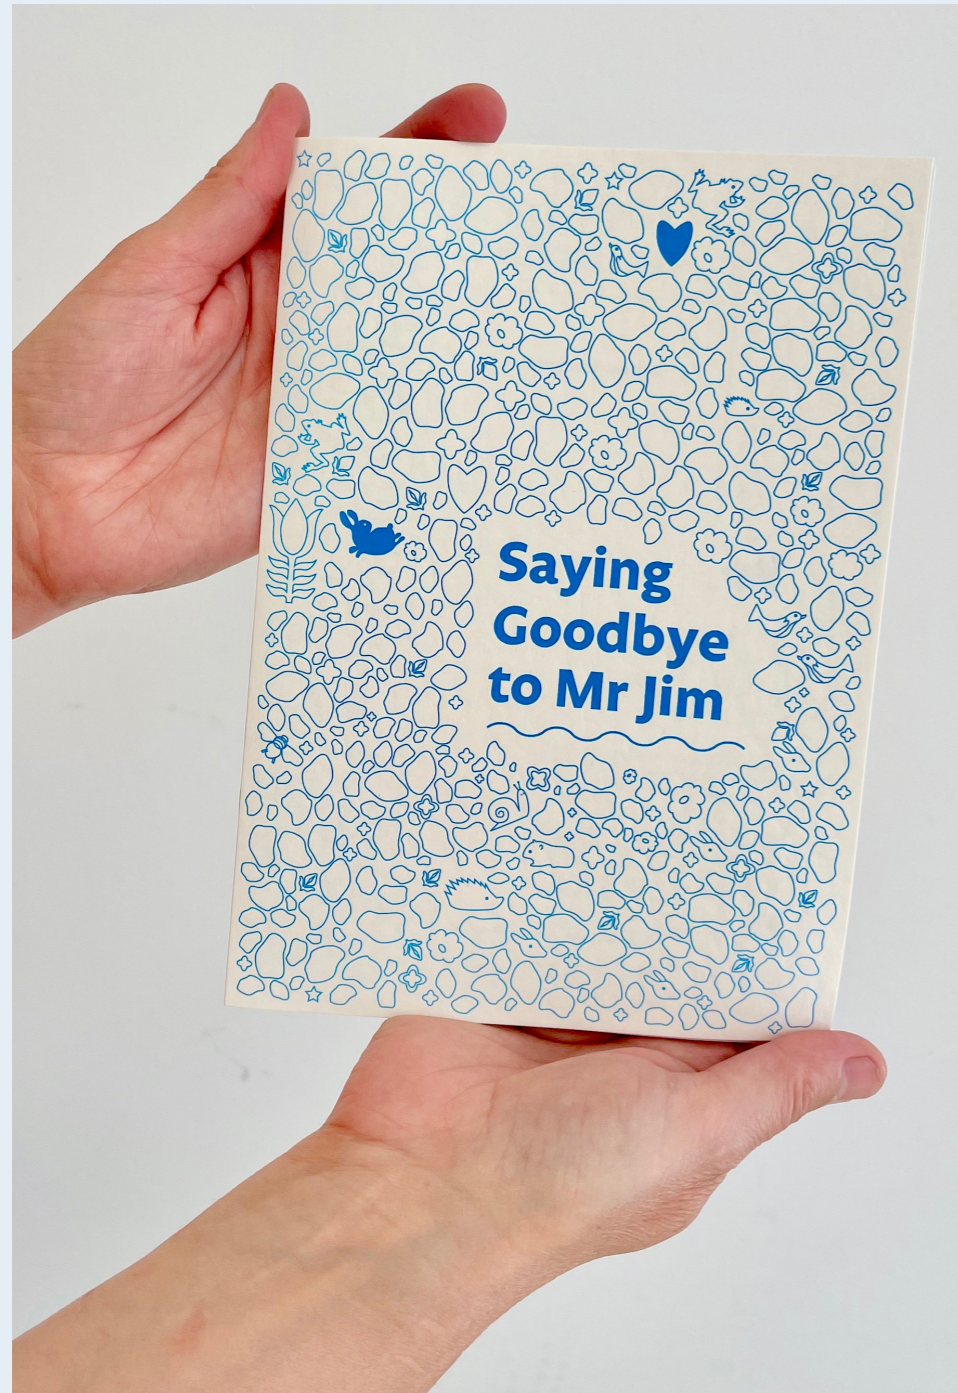

The Goodbye Box and story/ advice book, 'Saying Goodbye to Mr Jim' has been developed by MOTH as an aid to help children and adults cope with pet bereavement.

- * To be included in the decision making.
- * To honour the role that the pet had in your family.
- * To celebrate the life of the deceased.
- * To 'publicly' validate that loss.
- * To begin to make sense of the world. Give licence to feel sad, and angry...That love & loss go hand in hand.
- * To develop coping skills, to emerge with a sense of hope, And resilience.
- * To provide a framework/tools.
